

Tufted Titmouse

This bird, which lives in eastern parts of the United States, is silvery gray above and white below, with a rust-colored wash down its flanks. It has a white face, dark forehead and a short black bill.