

Ruby-throated Hummingbird

This hummingbird is metallic green above and greyish white below, with near-black wings. Adult males have a ruby red throat patch. Females lack the bright throat and have a white tip at the end of the tail. The bird weighs about as much as a penny and migrates more than 1,850 miles from eastern United States to Central America.