

Turkey Vulture

The Turkey Vulture is a New World species of vulture named for its superficial resemblance to the Wild Turkey. It has an overall brown-black plumage; light grey wing feathers are usually visible only in flight. The bare face is red with a creamy white beak.

